In Deinze, Omega Pharma has extended its existing office space by a new main office building.

In Deinze, Omega Pharma has extended its existing office space by a new main office building. This new office building, whose linear and sober architectural design is the work of Ysenbrandt and Partners, houses the management offices and those for the supporting services. When designing the technical systems, Ingenium paid particular attention to energy saving concepts. A very energy-efficient building was realized by applying earth-air heat exchangers, night-time venting and efficient energy recovery on ventilation air by means of a heat wheel.
